Greenfield High School, Greenfield, Massachusetts.

Foreword

A subject of much current discussion among educators is that education is a continuous process, involving the training of all American youth. Therefore, it becomes the duty of the public school system to build from the youth of America, the raw material, a finished product, the graduated student who is ready to face the problems of the world. We, the class of 1946, have chosen this conception as the theme of the Yearbook and will show how the various aspects of the program of Greenfield High School are similar to the phases of a building process.

The first step in constructing a building is the work of the architects. Similarly, in the building process of education the designers are the teachers. They, like the architects, plan the finished product and determine the steps which will mold the raw material, the students, into the completed product.

The raw material is, of course, essential to the building. In a school system the pupils constitute the raw material to be used in the construction. As the different students are naturally quite varied in interests and abilities, the system must have various programs to suit the diverse needs.

Next, the manual labor involved in constructing a building may be compared to the athletic program in the school system. Just as the laborers contribute bodily effort toward the building process, so the athletic activities aid in the physical growth and development of the pupil.

Still another aspect of the well-constructed building is the embellishments. The phase of education corresponding to these adornments is the school activities. The various clubs help to further the growth of the student by offering him a means of meeting and talking to others who have interests similar to his.

After these various aspects of the continuous building process have been considered, the raw material is shaped into the finished product. In the same way the pupil is, through his years of continuous education, converted into a graduated student. The reader should, however, remember that education, like a building, is never completed. Just as a house is changed and improved, so the pupil continues to acquire knowledge throughout his life.

Thus, we choose as a theme for the Yearbook the idea that students are prepared for future life by means of education, a never-ending building process.

Vocational Training for American Youth

EVERY year, industry becomes more exacting in its requirements for workers. Years ago, before the advent of complicated machinery, there was room in the workshop for many laborers. Today, the demand is for skill and technical knowledge, and with further development of machinery the requirements will continue to be raised. So, as industry expands and grows, education must expand and grow to provide more opportunities and wider fields of training to prepare youth for the competition of the labor market. The old type of formal education is no longer sufficient to meet the needs of a mechanized world.

Though the general public looks upon education as a process by which the mind is disciplined to logical reasoning and hopes that such orderly thinking will carry over into solving the problems of life, educators have come to realize that the combination of thinking and doing is the best education for those who are to enter industry. Building along this line, the vocational student at Greenfield High School starts in the shops on simple jobs of a real commercial value. He is thus thinking and reasoning on the why and how, and how much. All his thinking is not in the mechanical field, however, as there is a cultural side to life, even the life of the lowliest worker. Our vocational school builds along that line too. So we build — learning to do, learning to think, learning to appreciate.

To strengthen the tie with industry, close contact is maintained with the establishments in our town. Real jobs for industry are carried to completion; our boys work in the local plants after school hours and during vacations; our instructors, to keep abreast of the ever-changing trends in industry, align themselves with other artisans in the designing room, in the tool room, on the production line, in the repair shop. Thus, we become a part of the industrial development of Greenfield.

The contribution of the school to the industries of the town can not be over-estimated. The shock of the transition from schoolboy to worker is lessened by the gradual adjustment that our school shops provide. The discouragement of failure that means dollars and cents when it happens in industry is eliminated. Rather, in the sympathetic atmosphere of the school, mistakes are corrected and failures made the foundation upon which to build success. At the end of our course we leave the school and feel confident that we can meet the stiff requirements of industry, for we know we can do, because we have been doing.

The household appliances in our homes; the means of transportation — on land, on sea, or in the air; the food we eat; the books we read; the radio that brings us entertainment from remote distances — all these are ours to have and enjoy because some men dream and can make those dreams come true while others have the skill to make the dreams workable.

We have laid the foundation in our school. Now we go out to build on this foundation; to produce bigger and better machines, more comfortable and beautiful homes; to service the automobiles of the future — to make the world a better place in which to live.

Education for American Youth

EDUCATION is a building process, and the young people of America are the raw materials. Since youth is as diversified as are the varied raw materials that are used in the construction of a building, the pupils have to be tempered and processed just as the raw materials have to be prepared in order to make fine, polished products. This is accomplished through a thorough education of youth's hand, heart, and mind. However, consideration is given to different interests and abilities. The possibility of accomplishing this feat in Greenfield High School is by having different courses to suit different types of pupils.

For example, in our College Preparatory Course, a boy or girl, wishing to go to college, will receive a well-rounded education that will fit him to enter any college in the land. Likewise, a boy or girl wishing to prepare for office or secretarial work will get the best possible training in our Commercial Course. Also, the Liberal Arts Curriculum offers a broad, general training on which the practical affairs of life and occupational preparation after graduation may be based. Under the guidance of a counselor, a pupil chooses the course that will suit his interests and develop to the utmost his hand, heart, and mind.

I shall trace the training and development of a student's hand first. A training which is very useful to girls is household arts. Here a girl is taught how to make her clothes, how to cook delicious foods, and how to plan meals. Attractive dresses, modeled by many of the girls, and pungent odors that emit from the home economics kitchen are evidences of pupils' skills.

In science courses for the college-preparatory pupils, moreover, laboratory work is stressed. In chemistry the pupil performs his own experiments with various apparatus and chemicals as well as records his results in a notebook. In the physics laboratory a pupil is allowed to experiment with certain natural phenomena and derive his own conclusions. In biology, plant life is investigated and observed by the student.

Art is a very good course for developing the hand, also. We have not only creative art and freehand drawing but also mechanical drawing, a subject which develops technical skill. In this course a student is taught how to make accurate, scaled drawings of plans; whereas in freehand drawing or creative art classes the pupil has a freedom of expression and develops his hand in accordance with his ability.

Furthermore, stenography, a skill offered to commercial students and a course which may be taken by liberal arts students if their counselor agrees, develops manual dexterity. A person must be able to transcribe letters both accurately and rapidly. Also, after the fundamentals have been mastered, a student may win a Gregg Certificate for being able to transcribe either sixty or eighty words a minute.

Typewriting, which plays an important part in the entrance to the business world, is another operation which requires speed and accuracy of the hand as well as mental concentration. During the student's course of study there is an opportunity to win awards for typewriting forty, fifty, or sixty words a minute. Also, besides the regular three-year course, which is offered to commercial students, there is a special course for college-preparatory students. This meets after the regular school hours.

Next, modern education develops a student's heart. This schooling promotes higher morals, stimulates emotions, and cultivates an appreciation of beauty. For example, a student is taught to obey his superiors. Obedience is simply the way in which knowledge is recognized as power. In this way, by obeying his superiors, he is able to gain from them the store of knowledge which they are willing to impart.

In history and civics classes a student may learn the story and laws of his great country. When he realizes how arduously his forefathers fought for his rights and learns about the laws of his land, he will become a better and more tolerant citizen.

Besides the fundamentals of art and drawing that have been mentioned previously, there is further training in the appreciation of aesthetic things. A pupil has an opportunity to learn the values and form found in classical and modern works of art. Hence, he learns to appreciate fine paintings and develops an understanding and taste for good art, an experience which warms and deepens his whole life.

A student, moreover, learns to appreciate the beauty of poetry. By reading and studying poems, he appreciates the various moods and pictures that poets paint. Also, he develops an understanding and appreciation of good books through an introduction to them in literature courses. He learns to enjoy not only the light, modern fiction but also the classical works. Further, he is taught to read not only to gain knowledge but also to stir his imagination; and he is taught to evaluate books and to choose books that are well-written.

Likewise, through poetry, painting, and reading, a sympathy with nature, beauty, and fellow-men is taught. People learn to understand their neighbor better by realizing what he thinks, what he does, and why he does it. They attain this knowledge by reading books and poetry, studying art, languages, and history. In this way, also, a student learns the culture and customs of different people. When he comprehends the ideas and beliefs of people, he can understand and sympathize with them. Also, he can sympathize with the beauty of nature by seeing vivid word pictures through the eyes of poets and novelists.

While a pupil is developing his hand and heart, however, his mind is far from being neglected. In fact, it is more thoroughly developed in co-ordination with the former two. Furthermore, the capacity for retaining knowledge and an independence of thought is developed.

Typewriting and stenography, for example, develop both manual dexterity and power to think quickly and accurately because, when a student has to translate sentences into stenographic symbols, his mind has to be very well-trained.

In the Commercial and Liberal Arts Courses, furthermore, not only is a student taught skills but also is he offered knowledge about the history of occupation and their relation to industry and the business world in such subjects as economics, commercial law, and industrial history.

English Expression, also, is taught so that it can be utilized effectively in college or in the business world because, after all, when people apply for a position, the first impression a future employer receives comes from the written application. If a person can express himself well on paper, he is sure to be considered for an interview.

The most important development of the mind, however, is the fostering of independence and learning to think for one's self. A student first starts to think for himself in the matter of choosing his course. Further room for choice is offered in the courses themselves.

Hence, his education also develops a freedom of thought and a willingness to study all sides of a question. In orientation many occupations are studied to give the pupil a broad view on vocations. In languages, the rules are learned, but a development of thought is required to apply them. In geometry the theorems are taught, but a pupil must apply them. He must learn to have an unprejudiced viewpoint and be willing to look at both sides to judge an example. He must also wait until he knows all the facts before he decides. In algebra and mathematics he has problems that he must solve; in doing so he must consider the matter from all viewpoints. In other words, a student has all the rules and facts presented to him, but he must use his judgment in separating the grain from the chaff so that he will get unprejudiced aspects of the pictures.

Thus, we see that modern education will develop the hand, heart, and mind of all the students entering Greenfield High School no matter what their interests and abilities may be.

Student Council

The Student Council is the central governing body of the student school organization. From it stems the authority for all other clubs and for the various class guidance councils. Each member of the Student Council is elected by his respective homeroom fellow students. The Council has been very active this year and has tried to bring in more school participation by appointing committees outside of the Council. This organization has also acquainted itself more fully with various phases of the school, studied school problems, and sponsored many activities, including the S.A.S. drive, the Football Dance, Silver "G," and the Model Town Elections.

Growth Through Physical Education

EDUCATION should provide for complete living. In other words, it not only should promote the material and spiritual interests of mankind but also should prepare for worthwhile use of leisure and lay a foundation for character growth. Physical education aims at the latter two objectives. It does so by developing bodies, teaching ways to spend spare time, and strengthening character. My purpose, therefore, is to discuss these two aims a little more fully and show how physical education by accomplishing these objectives will help prepare young people for successful lives.

Throughout our school days we have read and have been told repeatedly that a sound mind needs a sound body. Our army has laid a tremendous amount of stress on physical fitness. All our competitive sports demand an alert and healthy body. Therefore, we have come to realize that success in any undertaking requires physical fitness.

During our school days this same stress is placed on a sound body. We develop our bodies through calisthenics and intramural sports. The latter has a twofold purpose. In addition to developing the body it aids in coordinating the actions of the mind with those of the body. Some may not think there is any physical value in such training, but I find that it awakens the mind, strengthens the body, and eliminates worry over one's physical condition.

Physical education also aims to reveal ways in which to spend our leisure. In high school we are taught the majority of the outdoor and indoor, active, healthful sports. In due time we acquire an interest for them, and our minds turn toward them whenever we have spare time. We have all, at some time or other, spent an afternoon by playing either baseball, basketball, tennis, football, volleyball, or any of the other athletic games. Thus we see that, because our school physical training aroused these interests within us, we continue enjoying these activities in our leisure.

In later life, however, we may not be able to take such an active part in sports, but we still shall have a way to enjoy our leisure. We still may take an interest in sports by attending and following the various amateur and professional teams. In the summer we may have baseball with its two major leagues, numerous minor leagues, and the local high-school leagues. In the fall we may enjoy football as played by college, professional, and high-school teams. In the winter we may attend basketball games played by the college and high-school groups. So throughout the year we shall be able to follow some kind of sports even though we may not be able to take an active part therein.

The last aim of physical education which I shall discuss is its character value. This type of education develops initiative through the competition offered by sports. Each position on a school team is sought by several candidates. As a consequence, each player eventually is selected as a result of his first having dared try something new.

Initiative — how important a trait for a successful life! This world is just one mass of competition, and it is the person with the most initiative who will succeed. However, in life, instead of there being five candidates trying for a fullback position, there are millions endeavoring for success! And yet, the training physical education offered will have benefited a person tremendously, for it will have trained him early how to attain a goal amid competition.

Another character development derived from physical education is that of having to take responsibility. Take a baseball game for example. Each player is responsible for each ball that he handles. The lack of responsibility is seen in the score sheet of the game. Whenever a player fails to do his required job, an error is charged against him on the score sheet. This stands boldly to the right of his name and tells everyone that the player failed to do the right thing.

In the same manner this responsibility is necessary in life. The consequence of a person's failing to do his job in life, however, is not just a mark to the right of his name. Sometimes his lack of responsibility affects many other people and has greater, more serious consequences. However, just as in the baseball game, if too many errors are committed, the player is taken out; so, if a person continually lacks responsibility, the people lose faith and ignore him. So, again I have shown that physical education lays a foundation for another desirable personal trait.

Still another character benefit of physical education is the democratic feeling it develops. Everyone on a high-school team is equal. Name, position, or wealth do not mean anything. Ability is the factor that is considered. A boy from "the other side of the tracks" trains beside the banker's son. They both wear the same kind of uniform and have equal opportunities. Each one has his job, and each one cannot do anything without the other.

In life, too, democratic principles and cooperation are important elements. In the last war we saw rich and poor fighting for one country, for one cause. We saw individuals play their parts as they would have played in a gigantic football game. The sailors took out the interference, the aviators protected the ball-carrier, and the soldiers scored the touchdown. Thus, both in the football game and in life, unity results in victory; discord results in defeat. How well to have practiced cooperation in youth so that in life one may be democratic!

Therefore, I do believe physical education did advance us and has provided us for future growth.

Track

THE Greenfield High School track team was again defeated by Turners Falls at the annual Franklin County Fair Track Meet, but not without putting up a strenuous battle. The "Greenies" were capably coached by Mr. Bush and led by "Pete" Petrin, who won the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard dash, placed second in the broad jump, and anchored the winning relay team. Also, leading Greenfield, were "Ray" Willis, who tied for first in the high jump and placed second in the one-half-mile run, and "Bob" Wickens, who placed second in the discus as well as third in the shot put contests.

Other members of the track team who won points were "Doug" O'Neil, "Bill" Miller, "Sandy" Sanderson, "Zeke" Couture, "Lenny" Harris, and "Eddy" Hawkins. The team was managed by "Vinnie" McHugh.

The boys showed an excellent spirit this year, and, with a continuation of this fine sportsmanship, another year may see Greenfield victorious over her noted rival, Turners Falls.

FOOTBALL

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS
FOOTBALL CHAMPIONS TROPHY

THE Greenfield High School football team, under the supervision of Coach Carl H. Nichols and Assistant Coach Stanley Benjamin, ended a very successful season with a record of seven victories, one tie score, and no defeats. As a tribute, the team was awarded the Western Massachusetts Football Championship Trophy and was privileged to have one of its members, "Fred" Wallner, win the "most-valuable player" award for the season of 1945.

The first game was played against Pittsfield on September twenty-fifth. Pittsfield, on its home field, was eager to avenge the defeat of the preceding year, but, with the leadership of Captain "Bill" Miller and with the hard running and passing of "Fred" Wallner, our team earned its first victory of the season. The score was 25-0.

The next game was played in Greenfield against a veteran Drury eleven, still disturbed about the 7-6 loss of the year before. This game, played with the absence of right end "Bob" Wickens, was spear-headed by his able under-study, Vincent McHugh. The game ended with the "Green Wave" triumphant, 24-6.

Greenfield, having won its first two games, was anxious to remain victorious. With Gardner as its next opponent, the "Greenies" remembered their previous-year's defeat and determined that such a result would not happen again. The game, which was dedicated to the memory of the war dead from Greenfield, was sparked by the superior line plunging of "Fred" Wallner and the expert kicking of "Don" Smith. The game ended with a smashing triumph, 49-0. In this game "Don" Smith kicked seven extra points and also gained plenty of yardage in his kick-offs. As the first team had obtained a substantial lead, the Greenfield reserves entered the contest and made a fine showing under the leadership of "Russ" Baumont.

The next opponent was Northampton. Although "Hamp" had not shown much success in previous games, it was no team to consider weak. However, as had been predicted, Greenfield won, 39-0.

The first pressure game which Greenfield faced was the one with Springfield "Tech." Since the "Greenies" won this to the tune of 26-0, their fifth game of the season, they found they were capable of playing under pressure. The features of this game were the fine blocking of Captain "Bill" Miller, the out-standing running and passing of "Fred" Wallner, and the defensive work of Paul "Barrel" Tetreault at right tackle, "Bob" "Soupy" Campbell at right guard, "Bob" Wickens at left end, and "Rolly" "Pete" Petrin at left halfback.

As the "Green Wave" had then won five straight games, the pressure was getting stronger. Their next opponent was Fitchburg, which had been waiting for this game all year because of their 20-19 defeat the preceding year. However, with the brilliant defensive work of Paul Tetreault, "Bob" Maeko, and Hermes "Cisco" Maniatty, as well as the fine running of "Fred" Wallner and "Sandy" Sanderson, Greenfield, by winning 39-6, continued on the victory trail.

The "fans" were beginning to discuss the Thanksgiving Day tilt with Turners Falls, but the team and the coaches still remembered the defeat which Holyoke had given them last year and were more interested in making even this score than in thinking of the Thanksgiving Day game. So the team went through its paces every night, did not brag of the two hundred and one points it had scored against its opponents' twelve, but practiced as diligently as ever. The Holyoke game came, and with it brought one of the greatest goal-line stands ever witnessed by the majority of the four thousand spectators. There was also the 102-yard touchdown run by "Rollv" "Pete" Petrin. The field was muddy, but consistently Paul Tetreault, "Cisco" Maniatty, "Omar" Bergeron, "Mickey" Rogerson, "Bob" Campbell, and "Bob" Macko broke through the Holyoke line. They often threw the opponent's back-field men for losses. The fancy running of "Bob" Sanderson and "Fred" Wallner, behind the brilliant blocking of "Bill" Miller, was also outstanding. The final score of this, the "Green Wave's" seventh straight victory, was 19-0.

This success meant that Greenfield would enter the Thanksgiving Day game undefeated and would face a once-beaten, once-tied Turners Falls eleven. As the records of the season stood, Greenfield was favored. The team worked hard for the crucial game, only to awaken Thanksgiving morning to find the playing field a sea of mud and water.

Greenfield entered the game without the able coaching of "Ump" Nichols because of the death of his mother; Turners Falls also faced ill-fortune by having two of their reserve tackles absent because of injury. The game was played, and, when the final whistle blew, the score was a 12-12 deadlock.

The "Green Wave's" touchdowns came in the first quarter on passes by "Fred" Wallner, one to "Bob" Sanderson and the other to "Bob" Wickens. On the other hand, the Turners Falls' touchdowns came in the third and fourth quarters, the first by a pass from Ramsey Parenteau to Henry Martin and the second on a beautiful 80-yard run by Henry Martin. All extra points failed, and so ended the final game of the "Green Wave's" season of 1945.

Boys' Basketball

UNDER the able coaching of "Stan" Benjamin, the Greenfield High basketball team completed its most successful season in history. The hustling quintet won thirteen out of twenty games, including six in Valley League competition.

With eight veterans returning for this year's nucleus, Coach Benjamin had able replacements for his regular five. Nevertheless, the "Greenies" didn't hit their stride until after two close setbacks at the hands of Adams (22-21) and Drury (33-31). However, with the resumption of play, the "Green Wave" accumulated an impressive list of victories over Northampton, Chicopee, Orange, Athol, and Turners Falls. They also avenged the Adams and Drury losses. Also, the only team to defeat the Greenfield basketeers twice was the Westfield "Bombers," eventual champions of Western Massachusetts.

For the first time in several years Greenfield was in a threatening position for the Valley League crown. After trailing by one game at the half-way mark, our team faded in the second half of the race. In the final standing, Greenfield was in third place, the loftiest position ever held by the Tap-town quintet.

Whether the record warrants it or not, any season is always doubly successful if Turners can be defeated. This season the "Greenies" triumphed over the "Indians" in two thrill-packed tussles. With Captain "Freddie" Wallner sparking the offensive in both contests, the "Green Wave" subdued the "Indians," 40-30 and 25-21.

The scoring leaders for the "Greenies" were "Fred" Wallner and "Bob" Sanderson; both tallied well over 175 points. However, all members of the team frequently made timely scores when most needed. The season was both a financial and an athletic success.

The Greenfield Seconds, although they completed a disastrous season, got needed experience to help them gain first-team berths in future years.

At the close of the season, the varsity captain, "Fred" Wallner, as well as "Don" Smith, Russell Beaumont, Robert Sanderson, Neil Hescock, "Gene" Rozak, and "Bill" Miller were presented their well-earned letters.

Baseball

WITH ten veterans returning from last year's squad, an experienced team began the 1946 season. The only loss from last year's group was dependable "Tommy" Collins, who did most of the mound work last year. The returning men and the positions they played are as follows: pitchers, "Mickey" Rogerson, "Fred" Wallner; catcher, "Harry" Hescock; first base, "Don" Smith; second base, "Jackie" Kirkwood; third base, "Russ" Beaumont; short stop, "Billy" Cook; left field, "Soupy" Campbell; center field, "Zeke" Couture; right field, "Bobby" Sanderson.

Greenfield also had some very reliable reserves who were as follows: "Nick" Prokovich, "Omar" Bergeron, Harold Duncan, "Doug" O'Neil, "Ray" Willis, Ricker Smiley, "Frenchy" Gagnon, "Joe" Tetreault, "Jackie" Gardner, "Tony" Sturtevant.

The Greenfield squad put in a good season during the Summer League, winning the championship for the second straight year. "Donnie" Smith and "Jackie" Kirkwood both batted well over .350.

In "Jackie" Kirkwood and "Billy" Cook Greenfield enjoys one of the best double play combinations in Western Massachusetts. "Donnie" Smith is undoubtedly one of the best first basemen Greenfield has ever had. Not only is he a good long-ball hitter, but he is good in the field, coming through with some most effective plays. "Russ" Beaumont, at third, does an excellent piece of work. He is expert on the defense and equally good with the bat. "Harry" Hescock has a strong arm and hits a long ball when he hits it "on the nose." "Zeke" Couture is very fast on his feet and really covers ground out in center field. "Bobby" Sanderson and "Soupy" Campbell also field exceptionally well and are also good at the plate. "Freddy" Wallner and "Mickey" Rogerson both have plenty "on the ball."

The Greenfield reserves served their purpose faithfully. "Nick" Prokovich can fill in very capably at third base at a moment's notice. He fields well and hits steadily. "Omar" Bergeron made the outfielder's work a little bit harder with some fine fielding and did a good job from the left side of the plate.

For most of these players, the 1946 baseball season marked the end of an outstanding record in G. H. S. athletics.

Girls' Basketball

THE Greenfield High School girls' basketball squad, under the leadership of Captain Mary Kells and the very capable coaching of Miss Dorothy Johnson, this year concluded one of the most successful basketball seasons in years. The young but spirited lassies played a clean, sportsmanlike brand of ball which may be credited to Miss Johnson and her fine coaching, plus the cooperation given by the team.

The Greenfield lassies, having scored a total of eleven victories against only two defeats, placed in the first division of the school-girls' hoop league. This fine record was accomplished through the team work of both defensive and offensive players and by the capable leadership of Captain Mary Kells.

The offensive team of Greenfield, consisting of small but aggressive players, was led by the high-scoring left forward, Lois Balser, and aided by the timely shooting and passing of center forward, Marion Bednarski, and right forward, Jean Cappelluzzo. The members of the offensive team worked in complete cooperation with each other as did the personnel of the defensive team.

The defensive team, although not having a chance to score, played a brand of ball rarely seen in this section for the past decade. With Captain Kells, assisted by Pauline Babcock and Dorothy Scott, the defensive team prevented many points from being scored, a situation which contributed greatly to the success of the team.

The record for the past season is as follows:

Greenfield—35	25—Alumnae
30	16 Orange
33	16 Arms
22	14 Northampton
36	25 Orange
27	7 Keene

Girls' Softball

SINCE girls' softball has gone into its second year as a varsity sport, there has been a great deal of interest shown on the part of the students and players of Greenfield High.

This season approximately forty girls tried out for the team and twenty-two were successful. Of these twenty-two girls about twelve composed the first team. The girls elected Dorothy Scott as their 1946 captain. Lorraine Keane was elected manager. The veterans of last year's team were Lois Balser, Mary Kells, Pauline Babcock, Jean Cappelluzzo, Anne Howard, Jean Cullen, Elaine Jarvis, Doris Adams, Dorothy Scott, Janet St. Denis, and Marie Antone. This year Barbara Nash, Lillian Jacobs, Wilma Cramer, Juliet Akey, Anne Wood, Gloria Petrin, Ann Coughlin, Joan Tetreault, Betty Jacobs, Marion Hill, and Jean Derry helped to complete the team.

The current schedule included more games than have usually been played in previous years. Our competitors included Powers Institute, Arms Academy, Athol High School, and Deerfield High School. The girls showed fine sportsmanship and had a successful season.

Cheerleaders

Under the leadership of Mary Lou Lockhart, the capable captain, the cheerleaders led the student body to victory for the fourth consecutive year at the Franklin County Track Meet. Inspiring the students with their school spirit and good sportsmanship, they helped to add another cheering cup to our collection of trophies. The cheerleaders encouraged the teams to many successful victories at home and out-of-town, in basketball and in football, and they will always be remembered for the spirit which was shown on the unforgettable day of the Thanksgiving game.

Bowling League

The Bowling League is open to all high school girls interested in this sport. This year's league was composed of ten teams under the very able direction of Miss Dorothy Johnson. The girls bowled each Wednesday at the Leader Alleys from October until April.

Since the league was instituted, three years ago, keen enthusiasm has been shown for it. Of the forty-odd members, several bowled high scores consistently. The following members are in this group: Janet Swain, Josephine Grader, Lois Balser, Mary Zentgraf, and Marguerite Fosmire. The highest single-string record was rolled by Janet Swain with a score of 123. Janet St. Denis reached the 300 mark for three strings. Other members are as follows:

The Educational Advantages of Extra-Curricula Activities

AFTER a structure is built, it is adorned in order to add to its beauty. In the same way, clubs and extra-curricula activities add to our education in that they further the knowledge and develop the interests of individuals. In Greenfield High School the many activities that are not a part of the regular courses are indeed an embellishment to the educational process, for they create vocational and avocational interests and they further social and cultural learning. In short, clubs and extra-curricula activities are an extremely important phase of education in all schools.

To illustrate the fact that these agencies in our school increase vocational and avocational interests I have selected the Radio Club. In this organization the boys learn all the parts of a radio as well as how to repair one. Because of this, they begin to prepare for either a career or a hobby in future years, and thus they grow through education.

Another school activity which arouses occupational interest and knowledge is the Journalism Club, an organization which produces our school newspaper, the "Exponent." The members of this staff learn many valuable things about journalism as well as develop the ability to think for themselves and express their ideas in editorial form. Therefore, this club also prepares students for vocations and avocations, and it promotes another adornment to their education.

However, there are still more immediate advantages of extra-curricula functions in this school. For example, an organization like the Dramatic Club has many social attributes. In this particular club and in the annual senior play we learn poise and correct stage presence. What is more important, socially speaking, is that we become adept in working together in real fellowship so that pleasant companionship results.

Other organizations which are of great social value here in Greenfield are the Student and Guidance Councils. Through these groups we become informed on representative self-government, because pupils choose their own representatives for these organizations. These councils become the governing bodies of the whole school and of the separate classes. So these factors all combine to stimulate a real democratic spirit among the students as a further advancement of their regular education.

In addition to the previously mentioned activities, there is intramural athletics which includes basketball, softball, bowling, and field hockey. These do much to better our education. Here we learn to cooperate with our fellow teammates and to keep ourselves physically fit. Moreover, good sportsmanship is another social advantage gained from this type of athletics. These traits will prepare us for good citizenship here in America and will give us also social prestige.

However, the ultimate educational advantage brought about through clubs and extra-curricula activities is that of culture. One illustration of an organization which adds to the cultural knowledge of the students is the French Club, where we learn about the customs, language, and traditions of France. This is indeed an upward step in the process of educational building.

Besides foreign culture, we cultivate musical knowledge in the Music Appreciation Club. In this organization we become acquainted with some of the great masterpieces of music as well as learn the style and techniques of many of the most eminent composers. This type of society helps to cultivate our taste and appreciation for classical music. Furthermore, this club tends to enlarge our own musical interests and our cultural education.

The Greenfield High School forums have been another great milestone in the building progress of education. These informal assemblies have given us a chance to express our own ideas freely. Also, because we have had some of the foremost authorities on current affairs for speakers, we have had an opportunity to gain first-hand knowledge of what is really happening in the world of today. This is of course a great cultural improvement in our formal education.

The final illustration of culture as developed in the Greenfield High School is the musical organizations. The Band, Glee Club, and Orchestra all contribute much to the pleasure of both participants and their audiences. As a result of belonging to any of these societies, we discover our musical abilities and start the training and developing of them. Also, we learn some of the technicalities of music as well as the way to master them. Because of these facts, I believe that the musical organizations in our school both further our knowledge and perfect our training.

Therefore, I conclude that clubs and extra-curricula activities in the Greenfield High School are of great value to all students, for they broaden vocational and avocational interests, they enlarge social advantages, and they increase cultural learning. Moreover, they are all upward movements in the vast building process of education.

EDITORS' NOTE

We, the editors of the 1946 edition of the Yearbook, wish to thank all those who have helped us in making the book a success. In particular we wish to express our gratitude to Mr. Primmer for his work on the advertising section, Mr. Adams for his supervision of the art work, Mrs. Studer for her tireless effort in proof reading copy, Miss Raymond for assuming the responsibility for typing copy, and, last but not least, Mr. Watt for his general advice and assistance. Without the aid of these faculty members, our staff, and our counselor, Mr. Higinbotham, the success of this book could not have been assured.

Journalism Club

Under the constant efforts of Robert Hume and Robert Bronson, co-editors, the Exponent has had a busy and fruitful year. Not only has the Journalism Club presented outstanding features, editorials, sports write-ups, and books-of-the-month, but also has brought to its readers pictorial reviews, taken by Mr. Primmer, of many of the vocational groups in the school. The Exponent has been a credit to the school in presenting a true picture of the activities and interests. In future years the Journalism Club's efforts will be reread and appreciated again by Greenfield High's graduates.

Music Appreciation Club

The purpose of the Music Appreciation Club is to create better understanding and appreciation of music. Meetings are conducted once every other week under the supervision of Miss Harriet Childs. This group is composed of sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Among their activities they planned and presented an interesting assembly program, in which the entire group took part. At each meeting a well planned program was presented by several in the group.

Silver "G"

Silver "G" is one of several Senior High School organizations. The applicant must be either a junior or a senior and the possessor of eighteen or more points. These points may be obtained in a variety of ways: through sports, through marks, through clubs or organizations, and through various offices held. This organization really represents a group of students who have successfully taken part in numerous school activities. At the end of the allotted time a small "Silver 'G'" is presented to each candidate successfully meeting the requirements.

Senior Hi-Y

The activities of the Senior Hi-Y have been numerous and beneficial in 1946. The members have helped relieve the clothing crisis, unloaded trucks for the Clare Tree Major shows, and have formed an athletic team among themselves. Among the projects sponsored by the club as a whole are: the erection of a plaque to the memory of those servicemen of G.H.S. who gave their lives, the placing of a stained glass window in our library, and the sponsoring of the annual Commencement Dance.

This year, under the direction of Mr. Chester W. Osgood, the Dramatic Club was reorganized. It included members of the Senior Play cast and many others who had not had the opportunity of participating in dramatics. ## The Challenge of the Future

WHY is high school graduation often called commencement? The answer to this question is that the formal secondary education is merely a background for the more important self-education, which follows graduation. That is, although a person spends nearly twelve years in school, much of his maturity will not come from that source. Rather, it will come from his every-day living.

One aspect of self-education is derived from the observation of nature. By observing and studying flowers, trees, and wild-life the individual will learn an important lesson, "the survival of the fittest." He will have the opportunity to see that in life as in nature only the person who can adapt himself to his environment and make the most of his opportunities will be happy and successful. Thus, nature has an important teaching to impress upon the person who will strive to learn.

Still another means of broadening the individual scope of knowledge is that of listening to speakers. In this age nearly every person has a radio, which will bring him lectures by the best-informed people of the world. Furthermore, he will often have an opportunity to attend interesting and informative lectures. If a person will only display a small amount of initiative, he will be able to educate himself with the aid of radio speakers and lecturers, the best possible teachers.

Travel, another aspect of self-education, is becoming more and more important. Now that swift and inexpensive land, sea, and air transportation is a reality, one may supplement his geography and history courses by actually seeing how other peoples live. A trip through colorful South America, war-torn Europe, or the quaint, oriental countries will teach a person more than all the text-books ever published. Yes, "Seeing is believing," and by really observing the mode of life in other countries one will become more mature.

Self-education is further developed by reading. Those who find themselves unable to travel may partly recompense for this loss by reading. Furthermore, a person may increase his knowledge of history by reading. The history books read in school provide only an outline of the important facts concerning the origin and development of civilization. Every person should supplement this outline by reading the novels and biographies of the great men in history. Lastly, reading will broaden an individual's scope of knowledge by acquainting him with the philosophies of some of the greatest thinkers of the world. Plato, Rousseau, Kant, and William James are only a few of the many whose works will aid the reader in learning how to live.

A further aspect of education which depends entirely upon individual effort is that of learning by observing the actions of others. Because the average individual is influenced only by his personal experiences, he often fails to take advantage of this profitable method of becoming more mature. If, however, he, remembering the mistakes of others, would try to prevent himself from erring in the same ways, he would spare himself the difficult method of learning by "bitter experience." Not only the mistakes but also the successes of others will help an individual to live. The person should carefully study the steps by which others have gained success and try to emulate the actions of these admirable persons. Thus, from the practical experiences of others a person may gain invaluable knowledge.

Another important element of self-education is that of learning to get along with others. Although this trait of character may be partly learned at home and at school, it must be really developed through the contacts made in life. The individual must cultivate a friendly attitude toward all his associates and foster growth in the ability to overlook their faults. Furthermore, in order to learn how to get along with people an individual must control his temper. However, a man may possess all the afore-mentioned characteristics but still be unsuccessful in his relations with others. This may be caused by the failure of the individual to realize that interest in other people is a prerequisite to success. That is, a person must put aside selfish thoughts and interest himself in the problems of others. Lastly, a man must learn to respect the privileges of his fellow men. He must remember that others have a right to worship as they please, live as they please, and speak as they please. Thus, the ability to learn how to get along with others will play an important part in the maturity of an individual.

The aspects of future self-education which have already been discussed are very important and necessary. Most important, however, is the ability to use the knowledge gained in school as a basis for more education to be gained in later life.

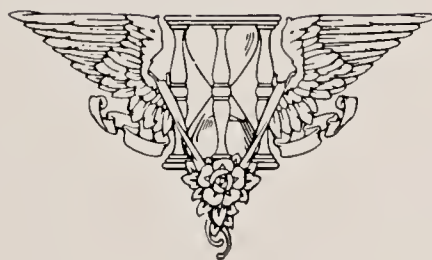

For example, students who have graduated from the vocational and commercial departments will further their education by practising and using the typewriting, shorthand, cooking, wood-working, or mechanical skills learned in school in order to become more proficient and learn more about the various types of work. That is, although the students have learned all that the school can offer them, they have merely started the work of educating themselves for their life vocation.

In nearly the same way, the college-preparatory students, using their high school education as an introduction, start at college to educate themselves. During their secondary-school day these pupils were told exactly what to do and in many cases how to do it. However, when they go to college, they must learn to depend upon themselves. It is individual interest and research which will bring success to the college students. Thus, we see that they, too, are educating themselves.

This discussion, therefore, should cause one to realize that graduation is the beginning rather than the end of education. From then on, the graduate must strive continually to broaden his scope of knowledge by means of the methods discussed, for only by sincere effort will he become mature and wise.

Class Day

The five highest-ranking seniors were chosen for the honor of participating in the Class Day exercises and addressing their classmates and guests. Alan McGuane, president of the class, after a few welcoming remarks, explained the theme of the program and introduced, in turn, each of the speakers.

Appropriately enough, the stage had a backdrop representing the G. H. S. Yearbook, thus emphasizing the fact that the speeches delivered at Class Day were a part of the general theme of the 1946 Yearbook, the concept of education as a building process. The addresses delivered by these honor students may be found as introductory material to each of the major sections of this book.

Our parting day is now at hand,
And in this hall we sadly stand.
As we go on our separate ways,
We bid farewell to high school days.

CHORUS

All through the years we'll ne'er forget
The fun we've had, the friends we've met.
Oh, Greenfield High, dear Greenfield High,
Our love for you will never die.

II

Oh, loyalty and scholarship
And honor hold us in their grip;
They've given us this motto true,
To guide us well in all we do.

(Repeat Chorus)

III

In every year at G. H. S.
We came to learn to do our best.
For counsel of our teachers wise
Our grateful thanks will ever rise.

(Repeat Chorus)

Ivy Ode

(Tune: "There's a Long, Long Trail")

There'll be an ivy twining
    When we have all gone our way,
With thoughts and hopes e'er shining
    Of this planting day.
May its green leaves e'er remind us
    Of friends so faithful and true
And ever lead us upward
    In whatever we may do.

Class History

SETTING: Directly following graduation — on the wall at the north side of the High School.

John: "Is it true? Is — is it really true?!? It's a hoax; I know it!"

Cecille: "Of course, you're referring to 'Sparrow' Rozak's taking Elaine Jarvis' picture. Yes, I, myself, thought he was getting a little forward."

John: (surprised) — "Golly, that, too. This whole business is a mirage — 'Sparrow,' graduation, this blessed diploma, everything! Hit me. See if I'm dreaming!" (Wham) "O.K., O.K., it's true."

Cecille: "I'm only obliging. I wanted to make sure you knew what was going on. You're now a man of the world. You've got to know what's about you." (Pause) "Gee, but I can't believe we've graduated. Of course, I expected it to happen some day."

John: "I did, too, for that matter. But, gee, the memory of my sophomore year is as clear now as it was two years ago."

Cecille: "Let's see, I wasn't at Greenfield High that year. However, 'Margy' Fosmire and 'Bobby' Spungin used to keep me pretty well posted on the activities. I remember a letter telling me that 'Lulu' Lockhart and 'Ellie' Smith were the only sophomore cheerleaders that year. Weren't they cheering at the fair grounds when we won the cup?"

John: "Yep! You couldn't miss them flying through the air, but that was just one of the activities in which we sophomores participated. I remember the Sophomore Reception now. Boy, that was a 'humdinger.' We were welcomed in gala fashion. Struttin' high, naturally, were 'Bill' Miller and 'Tony' Waite. Sharp couple!"

Cecille: "That must have been the dance that annoyed the senior girls when they saw our blooming sophomore girls making off with the dashing senior boys."

John: "Well, annoyed or not, it didn't do them a bit of good. Even as sophomores we shone."

Cecille: "I agree, of course. I remember hearing you played the drums at one dance. Was that the Sophomore Reception?"

John: "Yes, but let's skip that. Let me tell you the rest. The 1943 football season was 'Freddie' Wallner's first year at first string. Of course, there were other sophomores who were plugging for the good of the team — George Russo, 'Zeke' Couture, 'Foggy' Wallwork."

Cecille: "That reminds me of the line-up I was sent. Weren't 'Bob' Wickens and 'Bucky' McGuane on the team that year?"

John: "Sure, but 'Jimmy' Robarge and — wait a second; let's see — 'Pete' Petrin, 'Normy' Oates, and Paulin Bukowski, were all plugging for experience to use in their junior year. 'Course, we can't forget Bruce Cunningham. He's in the navy now but was football manager in his sophomore year."

Cecille: "Oh, yes, now I remember the whole season. That was 'Ray' Keane's first as class president. Mary Wells was secretary, but who were the other class officers?"

John: "Pardon, but look. There's 'Ellie' Smith taking 'Sue' Weisberg's picture. 'Ellie' deserted us for another school this year but is still 'in' with the 'kids.' She was our vice-president during our sophomore year. Muriel Graves, another deserter, was treasurer."

Cecille: "It should have been a good year with those officers."

John: "It sure was. We really sailed into 'Club '46.'"

Cecille: "Ho! I can tell you all about 'Club '46.' 'Margie' Cotton and 'Kitty' Akey wrote me all about it. They were all 'het-up' over the originality. I guess the class really liked the novelty of it."

John: "They sure did. Mr. Higinbotham really brought something with him when he came to G.H.S. You know, he was the one who introduced the idea of the night-club style. Our first 'Club '46' followed a South American theme, and we even had waitresses to serve the food on which the Home Economics girls did such a good job."

Cecille: "We even had a floor show, didn't we? If I remember, 'Don' Smead and Claire Holmes entertained."

John: "They did a swell job, too. In fact, the whole affair went off much better than the post-exam dance we gave earlier in the season."

Cecille: "Say, didn't the sophomores do anything else besides give dances?"

John: "Golly, they certainly did. Let me tell you some of the sophomores who belonged to the Drill Corps. Jo-Anne Clark, Rita Poirier, Janet St. Denis, Mary Maleno, and 'Dot' Grueling all belonged. The Corps really helped brighten our Thanksgiving Day game. The people surely needed something bright to counteract a disappointing, scoreless tie."

Cecille: "Well, good for us. However, that was only one thing in which the sophomores participated. How about something else?"

John: "Well, what about our Sigma Hi-Y? I don't remember all the fellows, but I remember 'Ken' Black, 'Charlie' Harris, and 'Al' Tyler doing a lot of bowling on one of their teams."

Cecille: "Good enough! Hey, 'Johnny,' look! There's 'Ray' Keane. Boy, he looks really sharp in his navy uniform. He made it just in time to see his classmates graduate, didn't he?"

John: "Yes, it's good to see him again. He was always a sharp character, even to the point of being elected class president again in our junior year."

Cecille: " 'Ellie' Smith was reelected, too; wasn't she? I should be able to remember because I was here to watch things first-hand."

John: "Then you should remember that we also elected 'Dimpy' Babcock and 'Foggy' Wallwork as secretary and treasurer, respectively."

Cecille: "I also recall how proud we juniors were when we added two new cheerleaders, Elaine Jarvis and Marion Bednarski, to the squad and how they helped spur us on to win the cheering cup again."

John: "Cheering wasn't the only thing in which we surpassed. The band, under 'Pappy' Jeffs, really did an excellent job at the annual fair, thanks to some of our juniors, namely Beryl Carrier, 'Mickey' McFarland, 'Kenny' La-Morder, Jean Simpter, and 'Donny' Smead."

Cecille: "Weren't some of those great musicians also in the orchestra?"

John: "I guess a few of them were. The orchestra provided the musical background for last year's musical show — gee, I can't remember the name."

Cecille: "Oh, I know. That was 'G. I. Jubilee.' I think one of the best parts of that was the glee club. But, then, with voices like those of Mary Sullivan, 'Pat' Duffney, and Mary Zentgraf, what can you expect?"

John: "The best, I guess, and we juniors had it."

Cecille: "I guess we did." (Pause) "You know, I'll bet there are lots of proud seniors taking pictures out in back of the 'gym.' Let's go see!"

John: "Look, look!"

Cecille: "What now?"

John: "Look at 'Pete' Petrin dashing around out there. Thanks to his speed we won a relay over Turners Falls for the first time in seven years."

Cecille: "I remember our winning, but there must have been other juniors who backed him during the track season."

John: "Oh, sure! There was 'Phil' Lynch, 'Snooky' Bassett, and 'Herby' Aaron in there plugging. But track wasn't our only achievement in the field of sports in our junior year."

Cecille: "You're thinking of the swell basketball season we had, aren't you? The trio 'Zeke' Couture, 'Jack' Kirkwood, and Neil Hescocock was really smacking the ball around that year."

John: "Oh, well, even as juniors we were good. 'Club '46' came back again with a bang. We've really got to thank those sophomores for pitching in and helping serve at the dance. Claire Holmes and Mary Wells sang, and Jean Simpter tooted out a few hot numbers, too. We also had an exhibition waltz."

Cecille: "It's all very well to think of all the fun, but you should have seen the frantic search for gowns when 'original us' decided to make it semi-formal."

John: "It was worth it, as far as the boys were concerned. The fellows had a hard job keeping their eyes from wandering. Some of those gowns were real 'knock-outs.'"

Cecille: "Well, our class didn't have only beautiful girls and wolfish boys. You and 'Lulu' Lockhart must have worked hard to get your Silver "G" in your junior year. I think that's something to say for our class."

John: "I suppose so, but look at 'Jo' Clark and 'Peg' Hanley over there. They were new additions to the cheering squad that year. They were the inspiration that led us to win the cheering cup again."

Cecille: "Yes, and made us cheer good and loud during football season. We had a good year with 'Bill' Miller as our captain."

John: "That Western Mass. Trophy in our case in the high school hall certainly represents just how good a team we had."

Cecille: "'Freddie' Wallner contributed a lot to our success, and that fact was recognized when he was chosen most valuable player in Western Mass."

John: "We seniors had to show how much we appreciated the team's hard work; so we gave 'em the 'Pigskin Prom.' It went off well, and I guess the fellows enjoyed it. At least it wasn't as wet as that Turners Falls field had been for the Thanksgiving Day game."

Cecille: "Yes, I can still feel the rain trickling down my neck. Now I don't want to change the subject or anything, but isn't that 'Bob' Bronson over there? He was the 'Shady' character in our senior play, 'No Way Out.' Our class was really proud of that production."

John: "And the excellent basketball season both the boys and the girls had this year. Mary Kells certainly did an excellent job leading her team to all those victories."

Cecille: "What about the boys' season?"

John: "Guess they were just as good as the girls. It was the first time we came anywhere near the top of the league. Of course, our seniors comprised practically the whole first team. So what could you expect?"

Cecille: "Exactly what we got. You know, we're pretty clever a group of students. Look at our class officers — 'Bucky' McGuane, president; you as vice-president; 'Joe' Boissy, treasurer; and 'Bev' Smith, secretary."

John: "But they weren't the only ones who captured titles. Didn't you bring honors to the senior class by winning the Oratorical Contest?"

Cecille: "'Nuff said! Let's talk about the excellent job our Guidance Council did in choosing the Yearbook Staff. 'Chuck' Poirier as our editor was given a helping hand by Janet Swain and 'Foggy' Wallwork as associate editors. Laurels also go to the general staff; they worked hard on the book."

John: "Look, here's our class picture! I'll wager we looked great walking down that aisle that day. It's a good thing we had impressive 'Harry' Heseock leading us."

Cecille: "I recall when the class elected him marshal. That was a good thing, but they were really stupid when they elected us historians."

John: "Oh, go easy on them! They redeemed themselves when they chose Thelma Duperault and 'Walt' Rau as prophets. Naturally, the teachers knew what they were doing when they chose Mary Sullivan, Janet Swain, Mary Wells, 'Nick' Metaxas, and 'Nick' Prokovich as our Class Day speakers. They were great."

Cecille: "I agree with you, but let's sit down again. I still haven't recovered from the Commencement Dance. 'Herb' Aaron and his gang are really an original bunch of kids. My heavens, that 'Storm of Colors' was really out of this world."

John: "What about the new additions to 'Johnny' Newton's band? On the whole, I think it was the best dance we've ever had."

Cecille: "I imagine we're a little prejudiced because it was our dance, but it was a gala ending to three marvelous years at good old G.H.S."

Class Prophecy

SCENE: Gay's Graveyard.

TIME: Midnight, any night, 1960.

CHARACTERS: Walter Rau and Thelma Duperault.

Walt: "Ten days is long enough to be cooped up in this stuffy coffin. I guess I'll get my ectoplasm together and float back into the world."

After making this momentous decision, ghoul, "Walt" Rau, bid goodbye to his fellow ghouls and rode earthward on a passing blast of hot air. He drifted aimlessly for 1,006,000 miles, until, all of a sudden, a familiar figure floated by. He gave a long, low whistle and said, "Well, as I sighed and died, Thelma Duperault! Long time no see."

Thelma: "Walter Rau! What a surprise! But what's the matter with you? You're looking like a ghost of your old self. You must have tried to keep up with that man about town 'Bob' Hume in his round of night clubbing. Couldn't take it, huh?"

Walt: "Guess not. Seeing you reminds me of old times, Thelma. Do you remember as far back as college? And, high school? Remember graduation?"

Thelma: "I sure do. Boy, were my knees shaking when I walked across the stage for my diploma! I'll bet the rest of the kids felt the same way."

Walt: "And remember the swell football team we had? Undefeated! Why, 'Fred' Wallner was so good that after he got to Brown University they elected him water boy."

Thelma: "Yes, and, three days before I 'popped off,' I dropped into Galipault and Grant's Slightly-Chewed Gum Shop, where Claire Holmes plays the violin for people who chew in three quarter time."

Walt: "Speaking of gum, from my lofty position I see that Hilda Hohengasser has just established a world's record for continued chewing. She chewed the same cud for two weeks without a stop."

Thelma: "I remember the last time I was in McGrath and Trudeau's Tea Shop. They served delicious pastry from Poole's Pasty Pastry Products, Inc."

Walt: "Why don't we float around and see what we can scare up? Or, better still, let's light on top of this Bogue Bus. I wonder if 'Bert' Colodny is still the ticket collector? Yes, there he is. And look who he's arguing with — Jean Cullen!"

Thelma: "Oh, my gosh! She just landed a right that knocked him cold. The bus is stopping, and here comes officer Tyler. It looks like he's going to call an ambulance."

Walt: "Yes, and the driver, 'Bob' McDonough is trying to explain what happened."

Thelma: "And look! Isn't that 'Peg' Hanley running out of Hanley's Hoek Shop to see what's wrong?"

Walt: "It is and — but look, here comes the ambulance from Haskins' Home for Helpless Half-wits. There's only one person I know who drives like that — 'Bud' Pickwell."

Thelma: "Sure enough. And, for heaven's sake, look who they've got for stretcher bearers, 'Shorty' Bronson and 'Berny' Hickey. Talk about your extremes. Oh, dear, I can feel the ghost of a headache coming on. Let's drop into some drugstore and pick up an Aaron Aspirin."

Walt: "Here's Fargo's Pharmacy. Boy, what a swanky place this is!"

Thelma: "Isn't that 'Toni' Waite's picture on the poster advertising Coburn's Cough Syrup?"

Walt: "Yes, it is. She hasn't changed much."

Thelma: "I'll go out back and rustle up an aspirin. No one can see me anyway. . . . Guess who I saw back there? Dorothy Scott. She was eating a St. Denis Super-Duper, Salted-Sardine Sandwich."

Walt: "Yum, yum. Sounds good. But shall we go on? Hey, look below. There's 'Glen' Williams' Fall Inn. I hear John Masiello is bartender there. There he is now, talking to 'Jigger' Kirkwood. You know 'Jigger' graduated from Drinkwater U with high honors. He received an M.D. & D.D. Degree."

Thelma: "What does that stand for?"

Walt: "Mair-ze-Doates and Doa-ze-Doates."

Thelma: "I guess we got here just in time to catch the floor show."

Walt: "Gosh, what chorus girls!"

Thelma: "Yes, there's 'Margy' Cotton, Jayne Bungay, and Joan Daley. The years haven't detracted from their charms."

Walt: "Agreed! Master of Ceremonies, Paul Higgins, seems to be holding himself up pretty well on that Mosher Microphone."

Thelma: "Shh! Here's the next act. Well, if it isn't 'Bill' Miller and Mary Lockhart doing their Apache Special."

Walt: "They're good. But let's go backstage and see the rest of the celebrities. There's 'Sue' Weisberg. She starred in the Vernon Taylor thriller-diller entitled, 'Last Time I Saw Harris.'"

Thelma: "She's talking to a fellow trouper, Mary Wells, who played a swell role as Tiddly, in 'Tiddly Winks.'"

Walt: "There's Alice Pupek, the famous scenery painter. She also does portraits. Did you see her painting called, 'Bale of Hay'? It was posed for by 'Normy' Oates."

Thelma: "No, I didn't."

Walt: "Our supply of ectoplasm won't last too long. Why spend it all in one place? Let's flit on and see what we can see."

Thelma: "Boy, the air surely is grand tonight! It reminds me of the night we ghosts had a ball and 'Don' Smead and Gabriel had it out with their trumpets."

Walt: "I missed that one, but I did go to the tenth-wedding anniversary celebration of the 'Bob' Delfs. She used to be 'Judy' Deane. Do you remember? Charming couple."

Thelma: "Speaking of their being married reminds me of the present I gave them. It was a Ruther Rubber Rolling Pin. He was everlastingly grateful."

Walt: "You know, that was quite a party. They even invited Mayor 'Bobby' Wickens and his board of executives: Water Commissioner, Shibilo; Street Commissioner, Bukowski; Fire Chief, Greene; and Police Chief, Hamilton."

Thelma: "Hey! Look below! There's Marion Bednarski's Yo-Yo Factory."

Walt: "So it is. I've heard that 'Pete' Petrin and 'Harry' Hescoek are chief test pilots for the yo-yo's she makes."

Thelma: "You don't say."

Walt: "I do say. And 'Sparrow' Rozak has an enviable position blowing up basketballs at Banach's Baggy Basketball Co."

Thelma: "By the way, what ever happened to 'Snooky' Bassett?"

Walt: "It took quite a while, but he finally made the grade. He graduated from Mr. Bush's radio class about three years ago."

Thelma: "I guess I remember now. It was about that time that my Welene Weeping Willow had hysteria, and I had to call 'Omar' Bergeron, the eminent tree surgeon."

Walt: "I hear his chief climber, 'Charlie' Dyer, is still looking for a limb stretcher."

Thelma: "Isn't it growing light? Why, we've been floating around all night. How time flies!"

Walt: "Say, isn't that 'Eddie' Rogalski on the street corner holding his hat upside down in his hand? Why is he passing his hat among the people?"

Thelma: "Didn't you know? He sings there every morning for pennies — even for nickels sometimes."

Walt: "What's that noise? Oh, gosh! It's the milkwagon coming down the street from Duncan's Dairy. The driver is 'Normy' McGrath."

Thelma: "How sweet! He's stopping at Dobias' Delicatessen. You know, that's the only place in town where they sell Blake's Baloney and Sak's Sauerkraut."

Walt: "There goes the Mincemeat magnate, Mitchell, up the street on his Spungin Scooter."

Thelma: "And here comes the street cleaner. You know him. It's Herbert Blum. Doesn't he look distinguished in his white coat and cap?"

Walt: "Let's fly around this corner."

Thelma: "Watch out!! You're going to trip over that pencil seller. There!! I told you. You spilled all his pencils. Doesn't he look bewildered? He doesn't know how it happened. And doesn't he look familiar?"

Walt: "Well, shades of Hades and Harry Hatch, he ought to. It's George Russo."

Thelma: "Look at the name on this pencil I picked up. It's from Pele and Partenheimer's Pencil Parlor."

Walt: "What say, we catch the next Sabine subway and go uptown to see what's cooking?"

Thelma: "Here's the entrance. It surely is jammed. I suppose all these people are going to work. There's the Secretary of State, Beverly Smith. She was appointed by none other than President Kenneth LaMorder.”

Walt: “I never could get used to these subways. Boy! Do they travel! If I had any breath, I wouldn’t be able to catch it.”

Thelma: “Here’s where we get off.”

Walt: “Where are we?”

Thelma: “We’re at the corner of Streeter Avenue and Ambo Alley. It’s owned by the Ambo Brothers, Stanley and Leon.”

Walt: “Oh, yes! I’ve heard of this place. It’s the heart of the business section. They have here: — Maleno’s Meat Market, Swain’s Slaughter House, and Teague’s Tonsorial Parlor.”

Thelma: “That sign says, ‘Metaxas Establishment. Enter here to have your Pedal Segments Artistically Illuminated.’”

Walt: “What on earth does that mean?”

Thelma: “It’s a shoe-shine parlor.”

Walt: “What’ll they think of next?”

Thelma: “Who knows? Here comes an organ grinder. Do my eyes deceive me, or is it a woman?”

Walt: “It’s a woman. It’s ‘Margie’ Fosmire.”

Thelma: “You know, it’s too bad we aren’t able to eat any more or we could stop into Babcock’s Beanery. She serves delicious meals.”

Walt: “We’ve come to the end of the alley. Where do we go from here?”

Thelma: “Do you realize what day this is?”

Walt: “No.”

Thelma: “It’s the day of the big game between Perrault’s Pee Wee’s and Grout’s Giants.”

Walt: “I’d forgotten all about it. Let’s hurry over to the ‘Chuck’ Poirier Park. The park was dedicated in his honor when he donated a nickel to the O’Neil Orphanage for Orphans.”

Thelma: “Okay, let’s go. It ought not to take us long to get there.”

Walt: “It won’t. I can see the park now. I wonder why they have all those flags flying.”

Thelma: “Didn’t you know? It’s to celebrate ‘Jimmy’ Robarge’s birthday. He’s the man who crossed a chicken with a pig and got ham and eggs.”

Walt: “Looks like we didn’t get here any too soon. The place is pretty well packed already. At least we don’t have to worry about sitting space. I’ll draw up this air pocket and we can sit down.”

Thelma: “The game won’t start for a while yet. So I’ll have a chance to look around and see who’s here.”

Walt: “Just like a woman!”

Thelma: “Look down there. Isn’t that ‘Buck’ McGuane, whose pictures recently appeared on the cover of Hobo News?”

Walt: “Yes, and that’s his wife, ‘Peaches’ McFarland beside him. She starred in the ‘Annie’ Howard Review.”

Thelma: “And who’s that down there selling peanuts?”

Walt: “It’s William Hume. Remember him?”

Thelma: “Who’s that silly-looking fellow out there on the field spearing papers?”

Walt: “Oh, you know him. It’s little ‘Ronnie’ Moreau. I’ll bet he thinks nobody saw him pick up that cigar butt.”

Thelma: “Oh, look! There’s ‘Beaver’ Beaumont down there. I didn’t know he played on the team.”

Walt: “He doesn’t. He’s just the bat boy. They’re going to fire him before long, though, if he doesn’t stop chewing up all the bats.”

Thelma: “Look at all the billboards around the field. There’s one advertising Trumbley’s Toothpicks for the Toothless.”

Walt: “And there’s another that says, ‘Invisibility can be Yours with Vanasse’s Vanishing Cream.’”

Thelma: “And another advertising Wallwork’s Wallpaper.”

Walt: “And that one for Herdiech’s Hot Water Bottles.”

Thelma: “And that billboard for LaPlante’s Luminous Lemon Squeezers.”

Walt: “And that for Graveline’s Gravel Sifters.”

Thelma: “Oh, Goody. The game’s going to start. Here comes the team onto the field.”

Walt: “Hey, it’s getting terribly cloudy, and you know what rain does to our ectoplasm.”

Thelma: “You’re right; I guess we’d better get under cover.”

Walt: “The nearest place is Barger’s Book Store. Let’s duck in there.”

Thelma: “I wonder what’s good in the line of novels.”

Walt: “There’s ‘Kenny’ Black’s new book, ‘Meet Me in the Hills, Mills.’”

Thelma: “I haven’t read it yet.”

Walt: "It seems that 'Patty' Grotto, proprietress of a pet shop, is madly in love with a taxidermist, named Osgood. All her efforts to get his attention are of no avail because he, in turn, loves Mary Zentgraf, who loves none other than Lee Hammond. But, Lee's one passion is horses. Our heroine threatens to leap from the top of the Karpinski building. She rushes madly to the building, climbs madly to the top floor, climbs still farther, and, still madly, to the roof, gazes madly about her for one mad moment, and then —"

Thelma: "Oh, don't tell me; I'd rather read it."

Walt: "Okay. It isn't raining now. Let's go to the circus. I know where there's one in town."

Thelma: "Swell idea. I haven't seen one since my school days. Lead on!"

Walt: "They've set it up in Levy's Lot."

Thelma: "I know where that is."

Walt: "Here we are. This is a Prasol & Prokovich Circus. They've replaced Barnum and Bailey in popularity."

Thelma: "They're about to shoot a girl out of a cannon. It's Jean Simpter."

Walt: "Did you know that she insists on using only Grueling's Gun Powder?"

Thelma: "She's being shot from a Carrier Cannon."

Walt: "Do you know who's making $75.00 just for pulling the trigger?"

Thelma: "No, who?"

Walt: "None other than 'Jimmy' DeNofrio."

Thelma: "They're all ready! She's climbing into the cannon! She's all set! He's pulling the trigger, and there she goes!"

Walt: "They say she doesn't stop until she lands in Phelps' Pasture."

Thelma: "Let's go over to the side show. There ought to be something of interest there."

Walt: "There sure is. They have Jo-Anne Clark, the contortionist; 'Betty' Graves, the snake charmer; and Rita Poirier, the tatooed lady."

Thelma: "The show isn't ready to begin yet. Let's go down to watch the knife-throwing act. Clifford Locke throws seven knives around his assistant, Eva Moore. So far he's been known to miss only five times."

Walt: "First let's get some peanuts from Perry's Peanut Stand. He has done a booming business ever since he started cooking the peanuts in Four Roses. 'Bob' Whipple is his best customer."

Thelma: "Look over there. There's Shirley Briggs, the Bearded Lady. She's going toward the side show."

Walt: "The three-ring show is about to begin. Each ring has a name: Purity, Body, and Flavor."

Thelma: "Here come the bareback riders. I like them best of all. Do you know who they are?"

Walt: "No, who?"

Thelma: "Mary Sullivan, 'Kitty' Akey, and Elaine Jarvis."

Walt: "I'll bet you don't know where they train those horses they use."

Thelma: "No, where?"

Walt: "At the Sebert and Seibert Horse Farm."

Thelma: "They certainly do a good job. There's 'Joe' Boissy, the balloon man."

Walt: "His assistant is 'Pat' Duffney. He hires her to blow up the balloons."

Thelma: "Look over there at the elephants. Ruth Dawe, their trainer, has them well under control."

Walt: "The acrobats are climbing to the top of the tent. I guess they are ready to go into their act. They're called 'The Flying W R E C K S.' W for Wing, R for Roberge, E for Enos, C for Conway, K for Kikoski, and S for Sullivan."

Thelma: "The funny part of it is, none of them has been killed yet. They're very good."

Walt: "We've seen enough of this. Let's go to the animal tent."

Thelma: "Look out! You'll trip over that water boy. Why, it's 'Johnny' Polo. He must be taking water to the elephants."

Walt: "Yes, he does that to earn his way into the circus."

Thelma: "They've got a swell new lion tamer this year. She's Phyllis Phelan. She keeps her lions on a diet of Duprey's Dog Biscuits."

Walt: "I guess we've seen all there is to see. Let's breeze out of here. We'd better head back. One ration of ectoplasm won't last longer than twenty-four hours."

Thelma: "You're right. I guess we've just got time to stop at Couture's Cue Shop. He's the now-retired National Billiard 'Champ.'"

Walt: "He sells Cotton's Cue Sticks exclusively."

Thelma: "It isn't far, and on the way we pass Kaczinski's Carpet Factory."

Walt: "We're running so low on ectoplasm that I'm afraid we'll have to take a short cut by Brewer's Brewery."

Thelma: "He employs 'Phil' Lynch to tap the kegs, and Mary Murphy does the tasting."

Walt: "Soft jobs."

Thelma: "What's that whooshing sound? Look! Up in the sky! It's not a bird, a plane, or Superman. It's a Randall Rocket, headed for Ruth Mann's planet."

Walt: "Look, the members of the expedition include: Winifred LaCount, chief cook and bottle opener; Lucille Meader and 'Larry' Doucette, hostesses, and Marion Hill as pilot."

Thelma: "An all-girl expedition?"

Walt: "Yes, women have taken over practically everything. Why, Jean Lambert and Mary Kells are chief garage mechanics at Noyes' garage for jet-propelled rubber bands."

Thelma: "Fancy that! But, then, Theresa Pregony and Shirley Sevene have become leading carpenters and are head of a Carpenters Union."

Walt: "Do you feel queer?"

Thelma: "Yes, I do; why, 'Walt,' you're fading."

Walt: "So are you. Could it be that our twenty-four hours is gone so soon?"

Thelma: "It certainly went fast. I guess this is where we say goodbye."

Walt: "It is. Happy haunting, Thelma."

Thelma: "Happy haunting."

Not 62,940 hours for nothin'!

I figure I've punched in over 62,940 hours for GTD.

Maybe you fellows who buy threading tools don't realize it, but those hours mean something when you buy a tap, die or gage with the  mark on it. Those hours mean better workmanship — the result of years of learning by doing.

You might be interested to know that in the "Greenfield" organization there are 296 of us who have spent 20 years or more at our jobs — making high quality threading tools.
